This likely refers to a cannabis-infused product, specifically containing 1000mg of either THC or CBD.

There are various cannabis-infused products available, and some may contain a high dose of THC.

It is important to remember that consuming a high dose of THC, such as 1000mg, can be very potent, especially for individuals with low tolerance levels. This amount can cause severe and prolonged effects, including intense anxiety, paranoia, disorientation, hallucinations, and sedation that can last for several days. It is crucial to start with a low dose and gradually increase it to find the appropriate level for individual tolerance and desired effects.

Legal considerations regarding cannabis vary by location. In many places, recreational marijuana is legal for adults of a certain age, but there are limits on possession and requirements for purchasing from licensed dispensaries. Selling THC-infused products without a license is often illegal and may result in penalties. Driving under the influence of cannabis is illegal in most jurisdictions.
